On 31 March 2025, the Fund changed its performance benchmark from GPR 250 REIT Index (AU), where returns are calculated on a "gross" basis with respect to withholding taxes, to GPR 250 REIT Net Index (AU), which is on a "net" basis. The new benchmark allows for a more accurate comparison of benchmark and Fund returns. The impact of the change on the comparison of Fund's performance returns to the benchmark is not material and accordingly, the Fund's inception date used for since inception returns remains 1 April 2020.

Fund Commentary

This quarter-end marks the 5-year anniversary of the Dexus Global REIT Fund (the Fund). Since launching the Fund in the depths of the COVID-19 pandemic it has achieved an annualised total return of 9.19% (98bps above its benchmark) and corresponding standard deviation of 11.82% (124bps lower than its benchmark).

Over the most recent quarter, the Fund returned 1.94%<sup>1</sup>, 154bps below the return of its benchmark. At a country level, the Fund's stock selection in the United States contributed the most to the underperformance during the period, while its overweight position and stock selection in the United Kingdom was the largest contributor.

At a sub-sector level, performance of Datacentre REITs, particularly in the United States, was relatively weak on news of technological efficiencies in Artificial Intelligence (AI) and the potential for less compute power for applications as a result. The Fund's performance was negatively impacted by this development. Healthcare REITs, on the other hand, continued their strong relative performance from previous periods and were the best performing sector over the period. At a stock level, the largest contributor to the Fund's relative performance was Urban Logistics REIT (LSE:SHED). This specialised owner and manager of the United Kingdom's only pure-play last-mile logistics portfolio not only benefited from an announcement that the vehicle's management would be internalised but also news of targeted shareholder activism highlighting the compelling relative value on offer in the equity.

The largest detractor to the Fund's performance over the quarter was Welltower Inc (NYSE:WELL), a prominent Health Care REIT listed in the United States but with operations in the United Kingdom and Canada. Welltower delivered a strong set of earnings and robust guidance outlook for the upcoming periods and was likely further supported by investors for its defensive portfolio attributes. While the Fund holds a position in Welltower the quantum remains below that of the benchmark.

As relative-value investors looking for growth at a reasonable price, our investment preference remains for REITs with resilient, growing income streams and solid capital structures. Pleasingly, select REITs sharing these attributes currently appear miss-priced by the public market. Despite elevated macroeconomic and geopolitical uncertainties, in our view select global REITs continue to offer attractive long-term and risk-adjusted return prospects. We will continue to focus the Fund's exposure to these opportunities.

Market Commentary<sup>2</sup>

Global REITs (GPR 250 REIT Net Index (AU)) returned 3.48% through the March quarter, outperforming global equities (MSCI World Index (AU)) which returned -3.01%.

Such strong relative performance by the global REIT sector has followed periods of sustained global equity market strength, driven largely by the technology sector. However, with the most recent result to the end of the March quarter, global equities and global REITs have delivered similar 1-yr total returns. In our view, the relative strength of the global REITs has been supported by a rotation away from high valuation technology names into more defensive equities with relatively visible earnings streams which characterise the sector.

Across the Global REITs, country level performance through the quarter was driven by Belgium (16.68%), France (11.34%) and Hong Kong (9.97%) while the United States (2.95%), Spain (2.64%) and Canada (1.09%) lagged. At a sub-sector level Health Care REITs (13.80%) performed the strongest. The sub-sector's relative strength appeared to be driven by solid operating results reported by the largest United States based sector REITs earlier in the period along with the highly resilient nature of the asset class amidst increasing levels of market volatility. An element of investor rotation out of technology likely also assisted and to the detriment of the Data Centre REITs (-18.34%), which were the worst performing sector following developments in AI that may suggest lesser compute demand.

Our analysis of fundamentals suggests that on balance tenant demand is robust, market rental levels are stable or growing and there is further support for top-line revenue growth as annual rent indexation progresses through existing leases. This set-up suggests select well capitalised and managed REITs are positioned to deliver strong returns, in our view.

In our view, performance from here will be led by select Global REITs whose portfolios and capital structures are positioned to deliver resilient bottom-line earnings. Regardless of macroeconomic or geopolitical uncertainties. As an active manager, we are currently looking to capitalise on these opportunities as we actively manage the portfolio.
